

The New York Times

ARTS, BRIEFLY

Festival Celebrates Arts Under Communist Rule

Compiled by DAVE ITZKOFF

Published: June 24, 2009

Győr National Ballet from Hungary in Petruska by Béla Szabó

The New York Public Library for the Performing Arts announced on Wednesday its schedule for a five-month festival celebrating the role that the performing arts played in the decline of communism in Europe. The festival, Performing Revolution in Central and Eastern Europe, will run Nov. 6 through March 31, and feature performances, exhibitions, film screenings, readings and other events, its organizers said. More information is at performingrevolution.org.